Being a good parent is one of the most difficult, yet most rewarding, jobs a person can have in his or her lifetime. Being the parent of a teen is an especially daunting phase of the journey. As parents begin to notice the significant changes that come with adolescence (physical changes brought about by puberty, the constant angst and moodiness, and of course the classic eye-rolling and the I-know-it-all attitude), they wonder just what happened to their sweet, and affectionate young boy or girl. Parents sit by amazed—and often lost and unprepared—as they witness their child morph and mutate into a full-blown pubescent display of emotions.

The Angst of Adolescence, written in a conversational, informative, humorous and relatable style, is a trustworthy resource for parents of teens who are searching for guidance about how to maneuver their way through this tricky developmental period. Dr. Sara Villanueva, a prominent psychologist specializing in the adolescent years, shares relevant research findings so that parents can be informed of the facts as opposed to making assumptions based on ubiquitous but questionable sources. Most of all it provides parents of teenagers with perspective in the midst of angst so they can come away with the sense that: (1) they are not alone in their experience of raising teens; many people have gone through it and we can all relate to and learn from one another; (2) most of what their teens are feeling and expressing is normal and falls within the expected range of behavior for adolescent development; and (3) despite the challenges involved in parenting teens, they should take time to focus on the positive things in life and live with their children through the tough adolescent years, to emerge on the other side with friendship and a deeper bond.
